WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order

Introduction

The WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order, established under section 253 of the Workers Compensation and Injury Management Act 2023, sets the industry-based premium rating system for calculating workers compensation insurance premiums in Western Australia.

The WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order (second edition) is effective from and after 4pm 30 June 2025.

The WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order provides for the assignment of WorkCover WA Premium Rating classifications (PRCs) to identify an employer's industry.

The system is based on the Australian and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification (ANZSIC) 2006, with variations applied to accommodate specific characteristics of the Western Australian industrial environment.

Overview of Order

1. Section 1 describes the changes between editions of the WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order.
2. Section 2 describes the ANZSIC 2006 structure (refer to ABS ANZSIC 06 Desktop Search Engine for more details).
3. Section 3 describes the PRC structure and details the variations from ANZSIC codes.
4. Section 4 outlines the coding rules for assigning PRCs to business activities.
5. Section 5 includes a flowchart to guide assigning PRCs to business activities.
6. Section 6 lists all PRCs.

WorkCover WA, from time to time, also fixes recommended premium rates that apply to each industry class to which the WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order applies. WorkCover WA's recommended premium rates are published on the WorkCover WA website.

Section 1 – Differences between editions

Differences between the first and second editions of the WorkCover WA Industry Classification Order:

- PRC 72121 - Labour Supply Services Not Elsewhere Classified is otiose and has been removed.
- PRC 87901 - Employer Receiving Social Assistance Services has been introduced to apply to employers or deemed employers under the Act who are receiving social assistance services (e.g. NDIS participants who directly engage NDIS support workers).
- PRC 96010 - Private Households Employing Staff is no longer restricted to permanent staff.
- PRC 96011 - Private Households Employing Staff Occasional Staff has been removed.
- Minor editorial changes to some PRCs to better reflect the classification.

Section 2 - ANZSIC structure

ANZSIC is a hierarchical classification with four levels:

- Division (the broadest level)
- Subdivision
- Group
- Class (the finest level).

The Division level provides a limited number of categories offering a broad overall picture of similar economic activities. The Subdivision, Group and Class levels provide increasingly detailed dissections of these categories. In Western Australia, recommended premium rates are set at the class level.

ANZSIC adopts an alphanumeric numbering system with a hierarchical structure (see example below), where the leading alpha character denotes the industry division. The ANZSIC Subdivision, Group and Class levels are denoted by numeric codes.

Example of ANZSIC hierarchical structure

Level	Code	Description
Division	C	Manufacturing
Subdivision	11	Food Product Manufacturing
Group	111	Meat and Meat Product Manufacturing
Class	1111	Meat Processing

For more information on ANZSIC, refer to the Australian Bureau of Statistics website.

Section 3 - WorkCover WA premium rating classification structure

WorkCover WA's PRC is used to identify an employer's industry. The system is based on ANZSIC 2006, with variations applied to accommodate specific Western Australian industry characteristics.

Generally, this is achieved by adding a "0" to the end of each 4-digit ANZSIC code forming a 5-digit code.

However, there are some instances where variations are required for industries with similar economic activities but which present a significantly different workers compensation risk.

These variations apply to the following ANZSIC classes:

- 0700 - Oil and Gas Extraction
- 0804 - Gold Ore Mining
- 0990 - Other Non-Metallic Mineral Mining and Quarrying
- 1090 - Other Mining Support Services

Section 4 – WorkCover WA PRC coding rules

WorkCover WA sets recommended premium rates for all industry classes, each with a specific PRC. The applicable PRC is determined based on the employer's predominant business activity as outlined in this Order.

PRC based on predominant business activity

The relevant PRC corresponds to or most closely describes the employer's predominant business activity. The predominant business activity is the one with the largest aggregate remuneration paid to workers over the policy period.

Generally, there should only be one PRC for each employer, unless specified otherwise in the following cases:

- a) more than one business activity and business location
- b) labour supply companies.

One location but multiple business activities = One PRC

Where an employer operates more than one business activity at the same geographical location, the PRC should be based on the predominant business activity. The PRC will apply to all business activities of the employer at that location.

Example – one location different business activities

Company A performs plumbing and tiling services.

70% of Company A's wages are for plumbing and 30% are for tiling services.

The predominant business activity of company A is plumbing services.

Result: Company A will be assigned PRC 32310 (Plumbing Services).

More than one location and different business activities = Multiple PRCs

Multiple PRCs may be allocated to an employer if:

- a) the employer operates more than one business activity
and
- b) each business activity operates from separate and distinct geographical locations
and
- c) the business activities are not incidental to each other, meaning
 - (i) they operate independently of each other
 - (ii) one does not provide essential support to the other
 - (iii) goods produced or acquired by one business activity are not used in the other business activity

- (iv) workers engaged by the employer do not work across different business activities
- (v) the business activities do not share the same customers.

The allocation of separate PRCs to an employer's policy will correspond to, or most closely describe, each of the employer's business activities.

Example – more than one location and different business activities

Company B operates two businesses: a petrol station and a café, located 20km apart.

80% of Company B's wages are for operating the cafe and 20% are for operating the petrol station.

Are the business activities incidental to each other?

Both activities operate from different shop fronts 20km apart and are separate businesses in their own right. They exist without each other. One business activity retails fuel, the other operates as a cafe. These activities are not essential to each other. Both activities have workers independent of each other and have different customers. The business activities do not provide essential support to each other.

Company B carries on more than one business activity, operating from separate locations and the activities are not incidental to each other.

Result: Company B will be assigned both PRC 40000 - Fuel Retailing & PRC 45110 - Cafes and Restaurants. The aggregate wages of workers at each location will be declared under each respective PRC.

Head office or service support to employer

Where an employer operates a head office or establishes a separate service entity to provide administrative or clerical support solely to that employer, the relevant PRC will be the one that corresponds to the predominant business activity of the employer.

If the employer has more than one PRC due to multiple locations and different business activities, the relevant PRC for workers providing administrative or clerical support will be the employer's PRC with the largest aggregate remuneration paid to workers over the policy period.

Example 1 – separate service entity or head office providing administrative support to one business activity

Company C is a large construction company. Their PRC is 30200 - Non-Residential Building Construction. They set up Company D to provide administration services to Company C and no other entity.

Are the business activities incidental to each other?

Both activities operate from different locations and have workers independent of each other. However, they cannot exist without each other. Company D provides essential support solely to company C. In this example the business activities are incidental to each other.

Result: Company D will be assigned PRC 30200 - Non-Residential Building Construction. The aggregate wages of workers working with Company C and Company D will be combined and declared under PRC 30200.

Example 2 – separate service entity or head office providing administrative support to more than one business activity

Company E is a large construction company that has two businesses that are not incidental to each other:

- a) PRC 30200 - Non-Residential Building Construction
- b) PRC 19190 - Other Polymer Product Manufacturing

Company E sets up Company F to provide administration services to Company E. Because company E has two different PRCs it is necessary to determine which PRC to allocate to company F.

Company F will be allocated to the employer's PRC with the largest aggregate remuneration paid to workers over the policy period. In this example 70% of workers' aggregate wages are paid to support Non- Residential Building Construction.

Result: Company F will be assigned PRC 30200 - Non-Residential Building Construction.

Labour Supply Services

Different PRC industry classification rules apply to the following labour hire arrangements:

- Labour Supply Services – supplying predominantly clerical staff

Where a labour hire entity supplies predominantly clerical workers to a host employer's business on a fee or contract basis and the work is performed under the supervision of the host employer or at the host employer's work site, the relevant PRC is 72120 - Labour Supply Services (Predominantly Clerical Staff).

Example – labour hire entity supplies predominantly clerical staff to host client

A labour hire entity specialises in supplying clerical staff (e.g. receptionists, office assistants) to host employers. The appropriate industry classification is PRC 72120 - Labour Supply Services – Predominantly Clerical Staff and each worker's wages would be declared under PRC 72120.

N.B – use PRC 72120 only if the labour hire entity supplies predominantly clerical staff to host employers over the course of the insurance period.

A labour hire entity's staff that support the administration of the labour hire entity and are not supplied to any third party host employer, are to be classified under PRC 72910 Office Administrative Services.

Employment Placement and Recruitment Services (PRC 72110) should not be used by labour hire companies where the predominant activity is supplying workers to a host employer.

- Labour Supply Services – supplying predominantly non-clerical staff

Where a labour hire entity supplies workers (other than predominantly clerical staff) to a client host employer's business on a fee or contract basis, and the work is performed under the supervision of the host employer or at the host employer's work site, the relevant PRC is the one that represents the predominant business activity of the host employer to which workers are supplied.

This category applies to most labour hire arrangements.

Example – non clerical workers supplied to a host employer

A labourer, project manager, engineer and accountant are supplied to a mineral exploration business. The appropriate industry classification is 10120 (Mineral Exploration) and all of the workers' wages would be assigned and declared under the same PRC.

N.B – Use the PRC code that applies to the predominant business activity of the host employer, not the occupation of the worker.

Section 5 – WorkCover WA PRC coding flowchart

Step 1: Identify likely divisions, subdivisions, groups and classes for an employer based on the headings in the Section 6 list of WorkCover WA PRC codes.

Step 2: If unclear read the preambles of likely divisions and class level descriptions from ANZSIC 2006 or use search ABS ANZSIC 06 desktop search engine. Note primary activities and pay careful attention to exclusions and references.

Step 3: Check section 3 of this Order to see if any WorkCover WA PRC variations to ANZSIC 2006 apply.

Step 4: Determine the predominant business activity of the employer based on the WorkCover WA PRC Coding Rules in section 4 of this Order. Note, the Order provides for special rules for multiple locations and/ or business activities, and for labour supply.

Step 5: Identify the aggregate remuneration paid to workers by the employer. Note remuneration may need to be declared under more than one PRC if the relevant WorkCover WA PRC Coding Rules apply.

Step 6: Assign the appropriate PRC.
